CORAM : HON'BLE MR.JUSTICE R.P.DHOLAKIA

Date of decision: 13/09/2004

ORAL JUDGEMENT

The present petition has been filed by the petitioner-detenu, who has been detained under the provisions of Gujarat Prevention of Anti-Social Activities Act, 1985 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1985") by order dated 16th December, 2003 passed by the Police Commissioner, Vadodara, and he has been declared as dangerous person.

2. The grounds of detention indicate that the detaining authority took into consideration 3 offences registered against the detenu which have been registered against the detenu. The first complaint being C.R.No.I 144 of 2003 was registered with Navapura Police Station on 2.10.2003 for the offence punishable under Section 379 of IPC. The second offence being C.R. No.I 318 of 2003 was registered with Raopura Police Station for the offences punishable under Section 379 and 114 of IPC on 22nd October, 2003 whereas the third offence being C.R.No.I 61 of 2003 was registered with DCB Police Station, Vadodara City, on 21.10.2003 for the offence punishable under Section 379 of the Indian Penal Code. While passing the order of detention, the detaining authority has also taken into consideration and statements of 2 anonymous witnesses involving the petitioner in criminal offences which were recorded on 23.11.2003 and 27.11.2003 respectively and which were verified by the detaining authority on 6.12.2003. The authority found that the activities of the detenu are detrimental to public order. The authority therefore branded the petitioner as a dangerous person as defined under the PASA Act. The authority considered the possibility of resorting to lesser drastic remedy under the ordinary law, but came to a conclusion that resorting to lesser drastic remedy under ordinary law may not serve the purpose and immediately preventing the petitioner from pursuing his activities whereas he is immediately required to be prevented from pursuing his activities and, therefore, detention under PASA is the only remedy available with the detaining authority that can be resorted to.

3. The petitioner in this petition under Article 226 of the Constitution of India challenges the order of detention on various grounds. However, learned advocate Mr Amrish Pandya, appearing for the petitioner, has restricted his arguments to the fact that when the order was passed, the petitioner was in judicial custody and, therefore, the satisfaction recorded by the detaining authority for the need for immediate exercise of powers under Section 3 of the PASA Act cannot considered as genuine. He has pressed into service the decision of the Apex Court in the case of Amritlal and other v. Union Government through Secretary, Ministry of Finance and others reported in A.I.R. 2000 S.C. 3675. It is submitted that the petition therefore, may be allowed.

4. The petition is opposed to by learned A.P.P. Mr. R.C.Kodekar.

5. Having regard to the contentions raised before this Court, a plain reading of grounds of detention indicate that the petitioner was in judicial custody when the order was passed. The authority, however, observed that he may obtain bail and on being released on bail may pursue his activities and, therefore, recorded a satisfaction for exercise of powers under Section 3. The Apex Court in the case of Amritlal and others (Supra) has observed that there must be cogent material before the officer passing the detention order that the detenu is likely to be released on bail. The Apex Court observed that the inference must be drawn from the available material on record and must not be ipse dixit of the officer passing the order of detention. The Apex Court distinguished the likelihood of detenu moving an application for bail from the likelihood of being released on bail. In the instant case, as can be seen, there appears not anything to indicate that the petitioner had moved an application or any such order was passed. The inference that the petitioner while in custody may obtain bail is therefore, without any cogent material. The authority could not have drawn such an inference in absence of material. The satisfaction recorded by the authority for need of exercise of powers under Section 3 on this material therefore, vitiate the satisfaction and consequently the detention. The petition, therefore, deserves to be allowed.

6. The petition is allowed. The order of detention dated December 16, 2003, passed by the Commissioner of Police, Vadodara City, Surat is quashed and set aside. The petitioner-detenu, Chetan @ Soni Jatishbhai Chavada, be released from detention forthwith if not required in any other case. Rule is made absolute with no order as to costs. Direct service permitted.
